IEW's student video courses: A brief history

- Original intent
  - Teachers learn the course: TWSS
  - Students get a jump start with the Student Writing Intensive (2001), then continue with the Student Intensive Continuation Course (2003).
- Teachers looked for expanded lessons.
  - Solved by Jill Pike!

Results!

I am writing to thank you for an AMAZING program and curriculum. If I asked him to write ANYTHING more than a sentence, the eye-rolling commenced, and he acted as if it were hard, manual-labor. Last year, we started with Student Writing Intensive A, and at the end of the year when asked what his favorite subject was, my son replied, "Writing." Thank you, IEW, for making writing fun and enjoyable.

Writing was a challenging subject for me to teach as a homeschooling mother. After many tears from both my son and myself during 3rd grade English, I switched to IEW for 4th grade. WHAT A GAME CHANGER! My son actually LOVES writing now. He is so proud of himself when he sees how well he can construct complete sentences and paragraphs. This extraordinary curriculum has been an answer to my prayers.

Results!

We are LOVING the Student Writing. We've tried several writing programs, and this is by far the best one. My children are having fun learning techniques that make their writing more interesting, and for the first time, they aren't complaining about writing assignments!

I am doing the Student Writing Intensive B with my 12-year-old son. He previously hated to write. He had dysgraphia, which is part of why we began our homeschool journey four years ago. Before we found your program, I couldn't get him to write anything, so I am very grateful.

IEW's student video courses: A brief history

Results!

I have been struggling to teach my children writing skills. We began the Student Writing Intensive writing course two weeks ago. I can already see great improvement in their writing. The DVD lessons are quite enjoyable and very clearly teach the principles of writing. My children are reluctant writers, yet this program gives them the specific steps they need to do the "job" well, without wasting their time trying to figure out what is required.

The segment on essays that we watched was informative, helpful, and memorable. It was enough for our teens to get some essays written according to the style Mr. Pudewa described. His teaching style is also clear, engaging, and humorous, and the young people are interested in the rest of the program.

Results!

We just did our first writing lesson today. I was completely terrified to start it with my son. My fears were a waste of time. I can tell already that I am going to love this program. My son did great. The DVD lesson was interesting and even funny. Thank you so much for creating this program to help us teach our children.

We are almost at the end of Student Writing Intensive A, and I am so very happy with their progress so far. As they practice all their new skills, I will be finishing watching Teaching Writing: Structure and Style so I can help them further. Thank you!

How to adapt the suggested daily breakdown for a homeschool program:

In a homeschool setting, students will watch the video and complete the homework assigned in the Suggested Daily Breakdown section on each lesson's Overview page. On Day 5, parents will collect homework, return graded assignments from the previous week, and reinforce what Mr. Pudewa taught on the video. Parents may also discuss grammar and/or literature during class time.

How to adapt the suggested daily breakdown for a one-day-a-week program:

In a one-day-a-week class setting, teachers can adapt the suggested daily breakdown one of these two ways:

- Using the videos as a guide, teachers watch SSS and then use it as a model for teaching the lessons live.
- Alternatively, parents can purchase the SSS program allowing students to watch the video at home and complete the assignment as directed for Days 1–4 in the Suggested Daily Breakdown section on each lesson's Overview page. Class will meet on Day 5 where the instructor can collect homework, return graded assignments from the previous week, and reinforce what Mr. Pudewa taught on the video. Teachers may also discuss grammar and/or literature on class day.

How to adapt the suggested daily breakdown for a two- or three-day-a-week program:

In a two- or three-day-a-week class setting, teachers can adapt the suggested daily breakdown in any one of these three ways:

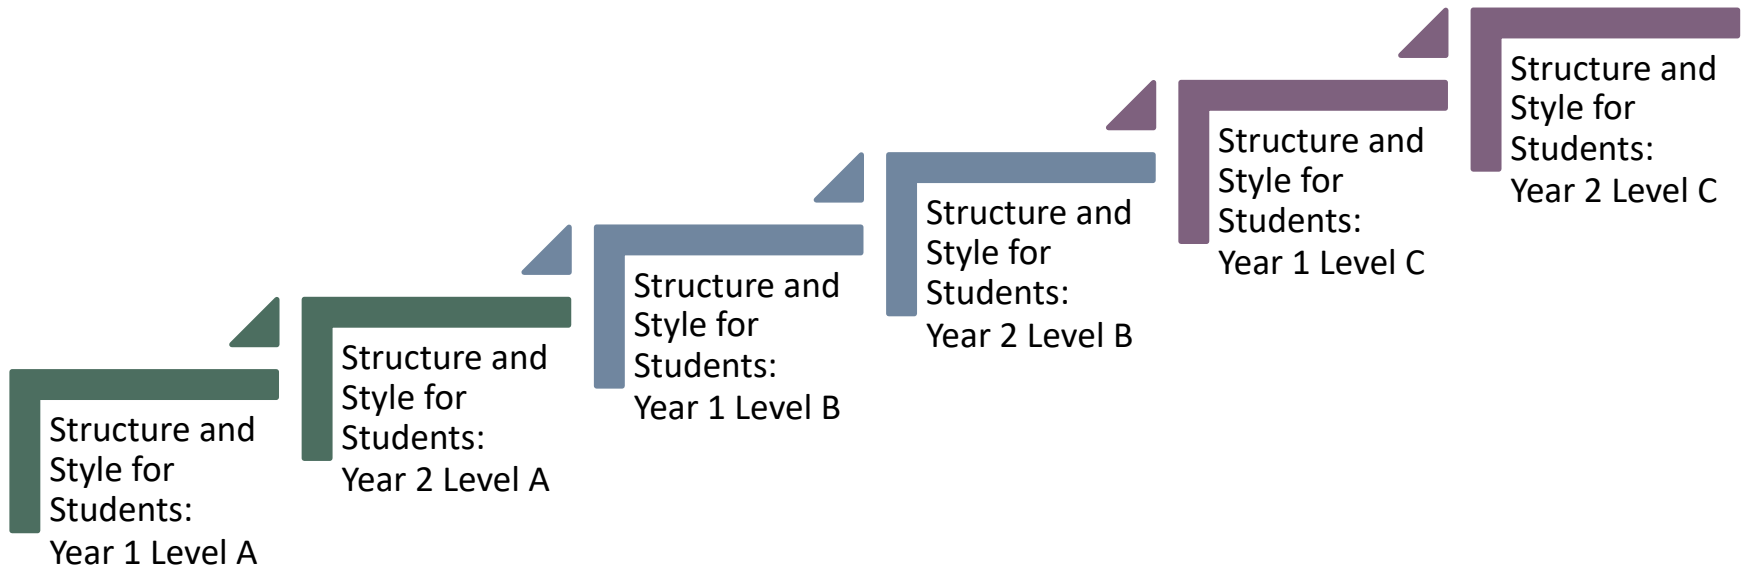

- Using the videos as a guide, teachers watch SSS and then use it as a model for teaching the lessons live.
- Students can watch Part 1 of the video in class and complete the assignment as directed. Any work not completed in class will be finished at home. The remaining class day(s) can be used to watch Part 2 of the video and complete the assignment as directed. Class time will also be used to collect homework, return graded assignments from the previous week, and reinforce what Mr. Pudewa taught on the video.
- Alternatively, parents could purchase the SSS program, allowing students to watch the video and complete the assignment at home. Instructors would then use their two or three class days to collect homework, return graded assignments from the previous week, and reinforce what Mr. Pudewa taught on the video. Teachers may also discuss grammar and/or literature on class day.

How to adapt the suggested daily breakdown for a four- or five-day-a-week program:

Teachers who teach in full-time schools can adapt the suggested daily breakdown in any one of these three ways:

- Using the videos as a guide, teachers watch SSS and then use it as a model for teaching the lessons live. The daily breakdown can remain the same, or teachers can adjust or stretch out the lessons. (See blue page for a suggested weekly schedule for adapting twenty-four weeks of instruction into thirty weeks.)
- Teachers show the videos as an instructional tool and facilitate the lessons by passing out the papers and writing on the whiteboard what Mr. Pudewa writes. The daily breakdown can remain the same.
- Teachers show the class selected clips from the videos, particularly those which introduce a new IEW Unit (Weeks 1, 2, 6, 9, 13, 17, and 20) and then teach the other weekly lessons themselves. The daily breakdown can remain the same, or teachers can adjust or stretch out the lessons. (See blue page for a suggested weekly schedule for adapting twenty-four weeks of instruction into thirty weeks.)
